Your Discharge, Private -- and $1,000

SPRINGFIELD, MO. — "Private Hyndman, here is your honorable discharge from the Army of the United States," said Col. Charles K. Borie, commanding officer of O'Reilly General Hospital here. "And here, George, is a check for $1,000," said Miss Lillian Carney, St. Louis, chief of occupational therapist at the hospital.

Pfc. George Hyndman, Omaha, Neb., wounded in the Italian campaign, built a model car in the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild competition for hospitalized servicemen and won top honors for the ground and service forces. His check for $1,000 arrived the same day he received his discharge and left for home.

EARTLETT-HOARE

All Saints' Church, Brookline, Mass., was the scene Saturday, July 27, of the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Hoare, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Hoare, to A. Bernard Bartlett, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bartlett of Bethel.

The Rev. Harold Bend Sedgwick, rector of the church, officiated at the 4:30 o'clock ceremony in which the bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride was gown in a sheer white marquisette dress which was made by her mother. Her coronet, of her grandmother's Duchess Lace, was caught with pearls on the sides and flowed over a fingertip veil. White sweet peas and stopanotis formed her bouquet.

Mrs. E. G. Sawyer, the matron of honor, wore a coral Jersey dress and carried tea roses and delphinium. Her head dress matched her bouquet. Miss Marjory Hunter and Miss Shirley Bartlett, the bridesmaids, wore yellow net and turquoise taffeta respectively. Miss Hunter carried yellow roses and blue delphinium with heads to match. Miss Bartlett's head dress was of yellow daisies and blue bachelors' buttons matched her bouquet.

Russell A. Phelps, friend of the groom was best man, Ellis Gauditz and Frank Hoare, brother of the bride were ushers.

The reception was held at the Hotel Beaconsfield. Mr. Bartlett and his bride left for a week's stay at The Forks, Maine, the bride wearing a ruffled blue tulle suit with all white accessories.

Mrs. Bartlett received her early education in private schools in the south, and was graduated from Brookline High School.

Mr. Bartlett was graduated from Gould Academy in 1940. He attended the University of Maine where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, before he entered the Navy. He attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he studied radio and radar. He plans to return to the University of Maine in the fall. The couple plan to reside in Orono.

4-H Essay by Laura Yates of The Jolly Workers Club

I joined the 4-H in September 1945. I was new, but I liked the first meeting, so I went to the next one. They had and I liked it with bet-ter. I kept on going and each time I learned something new. For my project I took sewing but when summer came, I decided to take canning. We had our first real judging contest February 16, 1946 with Miss Powers attending. We went early in the morning and had a picnic lunch. In the afternoon, Evelyn Knights, our club leader, gave us all a manual course. We departed at about 4:30 P. M. When the last prize was handed out a few weeks later, Phyllis Hathaway and I got it. In March came a notice from Miss Powers of Style Dress Revue. Five of us girls joined in that. A little later came a notice saying it was almost time for the Demonstration Tournament. From our club came five teams, Phyllis Hathaway and I had one on Medicine. We got in on the finale but Helen Keithwater and Ann Hathaway won the demonstration trip. The name of the demonstration was "Gold in Your Hand." July 16 we had our Local Contest. The articles were judged in Bryant Pond Grange Hall and then the club went to Raynor's Beach for the rest of the day where a good time was had by all. Then July 25th we had Field Day at Raynor's Beach, Locke Mills. Over 200 persons were there. We had races and played several games. That was an all-day time so of course we took our lunch. We all enjoyed a good time there, too.

At present I am busy canning trying to get my name on the 2nd pint honor roll. So far I have canned 63 pints.

ROWE HILL

Mrs. Margaret Bryant and Mr. Lyman Davidson and family of Long Island, N. Y., are spending two weeks at Camp Seabrook near Indian Pond.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lary and daughter, Madeline, Mrs. Kate Peasbody of Gorham, N. H. and Mrs. Lovie McAllister of Bryant Pond were visitors at Colby Ring's last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Caskey of Portland; Dr. Albert Ring of Hartford, Conn. and Miss Margaret Taylor of Quincy, Mass. were week end visitors of Colby Ring.

There will be a reunion of the Ring family on August 25 at the home of Colby Ring.

Sunday callers were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lane, Gorham, N. H. and Mr. and Mrs. William Bailey of Bryant Pond.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bryant of Freeport were guests of Wilbur Bryant a few days this week.

Misses Marjorie, Lillian, Norine and Shirley, also Rodney Ring of West Peru were callers at Bryant Sunday.

Norman Palmer came from St. M. Hospital last Monday night.

PLENTY OF FEED COMING IF GIVEN FREE MARKET

The tremendous corn and wheat crops maturing in the Midwest assure plenty of feed to Northeastern dairymen and poultrymen if average weather holds, if the crops are allowed to move in a free market, says the American Agriculturist, farm magazine of the Northeast.

In its August 17 issue, the American Agriculturist presented the findings of L. B. Skoffington, its Western New York editor, on a thousand mile personal tour through the nation's corn and wheat belts.

"There is plenty of feed corn maturing early in the Midwest," Skoffington observes in the farm publication's feature article, "Seeing it on a thousand miles through the corn belt I was thrilled by the prospect of stimulated dairy and poultry feeding here in the North east."

"In addition to the corn, there is a record wheat harvest, a near record oats crop, excellent hay and pasture conditions, and soybeans growing to perfection. I saw thousands upon thousands of bushels of beautiful newly harvested wheat that could find no storage space in elevators and no railroad cars to move it away, and therefore had to be piled on the open ground temporarily."

"Only two things," Skoffington says, "can happen to curtail feed supplies to Northeast farmers. One is severe and extremely abnormal adverse weather conditions from now on. Possibility of this is discounted, because veteran growers and agricultural college specialists are in agreement that the corn crop is made."

"The second, even more potent possible threat, is that government control measures may be reappplied to upset the free flow of corn to market. No one seems to know what Washington will do. But neither in the state agricultural colleges on the farms or at the country grain elevators could I find anyone who saw any reason for reinstating restrictions on movement of feed supplies."

Reporting that many farmers say their yield will be far ahead of last year, and state college men agree that estimated yields might be upped substantially, Skoffington adds:

"One Chicago newspaper had drought stories on page 1 for two days running. This worried me because I had not found this condition. A careful check disclosed that dry areas had existed in northeast Illinois. While I was in Iowa that condition was relieved by rain. In several places in Illinois, we found rain had soaked in three inches."

He notes that "Official corn estimates July 15 were for a three and one half billion bushel crop. Experts believe this will stand with just average corn belt weather. With better than average weather they incited yields will go up."

"I came away," he says, "convinced that if this enormous corn crop plus other feeds, come into free markets, prices will level off reasonably if the natural law of supply and demand is allowed to operate. On this basis Northeastern farmers can plan to expand milk and winter production of eggs, laying hens may be fed and poultry numbers may be increased. Both farmers and consumers have everything to gain from such a

AVAILABLE LABOR SUPPLY DECREASING

The available labor supply in the Rumford labor market area has decreased considerably in the past days according to the bi-monthly survey to employers, labor organizations and civic groups by Lynward F. Ashton, manager of an office of the United States Employment Service.

An acute housing shortage precludes the possibility of workers coming into the area, while others live so far from the available work that commuting is impracticable. One large concern has established a private housing center which ultimately will care for 250 men, and eating accommodations for about 500. Already this has made it possible for workers to migrate and take jobs with that concern.

During July, four typical employers in the area reported 2,234 workers on their payroll, showing a decrease of 58 workers in a 60 day period, reflecting seasonal change of employment by workers who take jobs with summer resort and recreational projects. By mid-September these four reporting establishments anticipate needs for many more workers, one reporting a minimum need of 385 employees.

Job openings on file with the Rumford employment office number 1,181, the Ashton analysis showed. Of this number, 2 are in clerical and sales occupations, 17 are in service jobs, 27 are in skilled trades, 771 are in semi-skilled work, and 355 are in unskilled jobs.

The other side of the ledger shows 455 men and women, including 238 World War Veterans, seeking jobs. Workers registered for jobs ask for 26 professional or managerial openings, 63 in clerical or sales positions, 34 in skilled trades, 136 in semi-skilled work, and would be content with unskilled labor.

The Midwest has fed to sell and wants to sell it. "There is no need to worry about feed supply because there is plenty of it. The only worry I found in the Midwest was whether government would let the feed move freely."

don herold says!

In recent decades there has arisen a new parasite profession in the United States—a new type of middleman—the fellow who says: "I'll give you some of HIS money."

In politics, this means: "I'll tax HIM and give it to you."

In the business world, this means: "I'll get you more of your employer's dough, if you'll give me part of it."

This generosity with the other fellow's money goes over big until the other fellow runs out of money or until he decides he's a chump to go on producing.

Without the other fellow's initiative and enterprise, the middleman soon wouldn't have any body to milk.

Veteran Senator Winds Up Long Career

Defeat of Wheeler Marks Passing of Able Legislator

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

There was something rather pathetic about it to me when I heard the President say two words that marked the obituary of a long career. The terse reply was made at a presidential press-radio conference when a reporter asked Mr. Truman if he cared to say anything about the senatorial primary in Montana in which Burton K. Wheeler was defeated by Lief Erickson.

There was nothing more that the President could say. He already had endorsed Wheeler with that remarkable loyalty that he has for his friends—a virtue which easily may go down in history as one of his faults.

Wheeler gave the freshman senator, Harry Truman, his first opportunity to show his mettle by letting him bat for him as chairman of the important Interstate Commerce committee. Truman made good, and a warm friendship developed.

But even presidential aid couldn't save Wheeler.

The other day I was looking over the autographed photographs with which Harold McGrath, superintendent of the senate radio gallery, had decorated the walls. It was just about the time that things began to look bad for the senator. We commented on the senators we had known who had ended long careers in defeat.

Of course, Sen. George Norris was the classic example. Five terms. Then he was replaced by an anti-Roosevelt man, Sen. Kenneth Wherry.

Senator Norris' closest contender for the longevously record in recent years was Ellison ("Cotton Ed") Smith of South Carolina, violently anti-New Deal. He was defeated by a pro-Roosevelt man the year after Norris lost out.

Up on the radio gallery wall is a picture of Henry Ashurst, the senator whose tongue fairly dripped epigrams. He came to the senate when New Mexico was admitted to the Union. That was 1912. He left in 1910, serving five terms plus five years.

The year 1940 was a bad one for veterans—besides Ashurst, William King of Utah left us, having served since 1917, and Lynn Frazier of North Dakota, who came to Washington in 1923.

Senator Wheeler served only four terms, but his vivid personality made it seem longer. He made many enemies. Many people disapproved of his isolationism and some of his other views most thoroughly. But there are many, even among his detractors, who respect him for his integrity, for his ability as a legislator, something which perhaps is understood in Washington better than elsewhere, and also because they consider his pacifism sincere.

I remember a conversation I had with Jerry O'Connell, former representative who tried to take Wheeler's seat in a campaign somewhat similar to the one which brought victory to Erickson. Jerry was pretty sore. He had a copy of the Anaconda Standard in his hand as well as a clipping. The clipping was a report of one of Senator Wheeler's campaign speeches, made early in his career. I can't remember the phraseology, but the general idea (expressed by Wheeler) was that if the Anaconda Standard, which was supposed to represent the sentiments of the big copper interests, ever praised Wheeler, it would be a sign that he was no longer worthy of the support of the people of Montana.

O'Connell read that to me. Then he picked up his copy of the Standard, and read from it some very kind words for Senator Wheeler.

However, I think it would be grossly unfair to say that Senator Wheeler ever "sold out," even figuratively, to any interests. As far as I know, he is as sincere today as he was when he made his first fight on whatever issue had a side unpopular enough to attract him.

In February of 1935 I had a long interview with Senator Wheeler. I have the yellowing clipping before me. It is illustrated with a huge photograph (more picture than text) showing Wheeler, his fist clenched and a victory measured in his favorite gesture. I remember when the picture was taken.

Here are two paragraphs from the story:

"Last autumn (remember this was written in February, 1935), citizens of Montana sent the same young man to Washington as a senator for his third term with the largest majority ever given a candidate by the Mountain State."

A decade passes and new voters grow up.

"Wheeler (I observed this in the same interview) came back to his office in the senate building with the pictures of the high mountains and the deep valleys of his adopted state on the walls, and a victory measured in the same magnificent dimensions. His hair is a little thinner than it was but he can wake the echoes with the same thunder he released when he first arrived. He is still up and at 'em. And the higher they fly the more anxious he is to make them fall."

Wheeler, Norris, Ashurst—they, too, flew high.

Matron Upsets Solon's Aplomb

Matron Upsets

Solon's Aplomb

It was during the day and night senate sessions on OPA. The senate recessed at 6 p. m. to confere deliberations at 8 p. m. Republican Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, bitter OPA opponent, and Mrs. Bridges went to a restaurant for dinner. Coming out, they were caught by a sudden sharp rainstorm. The dapper, white-linen-suited senator halted a passing cab, and he and his wife piled in. Before they could shut the door and in accordance with Washington's group riding a huge and very damp Labrador retriever bounded in, landing in the senatorial lap. The dog was followed by his corpulent mistress. Some moments elapsed as the quartet arranged themselves in the cab's back seat. The dog continued to snuggle and drip on the white linen suit.

Suddenly the corpulent lady, glancing sharply at the senator, said: "Why, you're Senator Bridges, aren't you?"

Bridges, pleased to be recognized, nodded graciously.

"Well," said the lady, jerking the eyeglassed canine away from the Republican senator, "I'm a registered Democrat!"

Schwallenbach

Yarns for West

There's a persistent rumor that Labor Secretary Schwallenbach would like to desert the Potomac for Puget Sound. That's not hard to understand since heavy pressure is being exerted to make drastic changes in the labor department and since Schwallenbach is as popular as he is in his home state.

In 1934, when he was running for the United States senate, Low Schwallenbach carried every county of the state—the first time this ever had happened.

Viciously, as shown in the recent rewording success of his brother, Edgar Schwallenbach, in winning the Supreme court justiceship of the state—his popularity persists today. Edgar Schwallenbach, almost unknown outside his own community, fled against the incumbent. The court elections usually don't draw a very heavy vote—yet the man with the former senator's name received more votes than were cast for the Republican and Democratic candidates for the senate.

The eyes of Washington Post readers bugged out recently when they read in a story describing senatorial wives' experiences with rising prices that "Mrs. Glen Taylor buys groceries for a family of 10, the youngest of whom was an 18-year-old baby." I understood immediately that the reporter had meant 18-DAY-old baby, because just two weeks before I had the pleasure of smoking one of the 50 excellent cigars sent up to the radio correspondents gallery by the senator.

Open Discussion

Smaller nations won the right to discuss any question pertaining to the peace treaty drafts for Germany's former European satellites at the Paris peace conference in a surprise concession by Russia.

The Russian action followed Greece's demand that the conference be allowed to consider any item which relates to a just and durable peace. After hearing Yugoslavia and the Ukraine of the Soviet bloc attack the proposal, Russian Foreign Minister Molotov advanced his compromise. By offering the opportunity for thoroughly discussing the treaty drafts, his plan would permit the molding of a sound peace, he said.

INDIVIDUAL APPROACH

Farm Plan Stresses Local Aid

Increased responsibility for conserving land resources is placed upon local farm and ranch owners in the 1947 agricultural conservation program. It is revealed in details of the new plan announced by department of agriculture.

The personal aid phase represents the only change from the 1946 program. For the first time, the program allows up to 10 per cent of county conservation funds to carry out a practice not included in the list approved by the government for the various states.

The balance will go toward carrying out conservation practices selected by farmers and communities from the approved list.

Costs 300 Million Dollars.

Authority for the 300 million dollar program is granted by congress under the agricultural appropriation act of 1947. The money is authorized to assist in carrying out soil building practices, soil and water conservation or the harvest of grass and legume seeds and to pay administrative costs of the program.

"Success of the program depends upon farmers and other committeemen who together work out plans for individual farms," said Dave Davidson, director of the field service branch, production and marketing administration.

Davidson explained that greater emphasis on the local approach should help farmers make more needed shifts from practices which were necessary for quick wartime production to those of greater long-term soil building value.

Operators of some four million farms took part in the 1946 program, or about two-thirds of the total. The area of these farms included almost three-quarters of the nation's cropland.

Fatherly Perception

By MARGARET ELSOM

WE HAD been married about ten months when I said to Marie: "Darling, how much do you think we could scrape up to buy a car—just a cheap one, any kind just so long as it goes?"

Marie was washing the supper dishes at the time, and me—well I was drying them for her.

Here we are, working on a fruit farm, 50 miles away from our nearest town. Once a week we managed to get into town with Mr. Kayes (my boss). But when a man expects to become a father in two months' time he wants to make certain he has a definite way of getting to the hospital ahead of the stork.

Marie sighed a little. "Yes, things sometimes happen before schedule. I think we could manage a cheap car, say around $200."

There had been an ad running in the paper along these lines: "For sale, Model A, good running order, five good tires, motor recently overhauled. Ceiling price; Phone 264." Marie agreed it might do.

I threw the paper aside and went over to the telephone.

"Yup, this here's the place, Mister—car ain't sold as yet, she ain't, but she's likely right smart goin' to be. You don't see bargain a-car-buratin' under your nose like this every day; no sir. She won't be settin' here long, no she won't, so you want to grab her right quick."

"How much?" I asked.

"Two and a half as she stands—right ready to exilerate down the home stretch—yes sir," he said.

We are working on a fruit farm. Gee, but I love her!

It happened that the owner of the car was a very old gentleman who thought that his rheumatism wouldn't let his leg move fast enough to "break" her when she needed it. He was slightly stubborn over the $50, but I won out. In half an hour I was riding down the front street, proud as any expectant father. I felt I had obeyed my "premonition" to get a conveyance—and my heart sang. So excited was I that I pulled her over to the curb and went into the corner drug store to phone Marie.

"Darling," I said, "we are the owner of a $200 automobile—and it runs." She sounded excited. "What's the matter—you're all right, are you?" I asked breathlessly.

"Oh, yes, dear," she said, "but hurry home—it's happened."

My heart ceased to beat and the booth went all black for just a moment, but, pulling myself together, as an expectant father should, I told her to get right into bed. I would be home immediately. It had happened—and her all alone, and—and at the telephone! Why it was impossible. But she said it had happened. Oh, the poor darling.

I jumped into the car and raced around to Dr. Gillet's. He was just changing a tire in his garage. I streaked across the lawn and pulled him toward my humble car, explaining what had happened. "I'll take you out, doctor—I'll take you out—never mind your flat tire—I'll run you out to Marie right away."

"But—but my dear man," he said, "let me at least get my bag."

He rushed to the house, coming out again in two seconds flat, jumping in the car, he answered the phone: "Yes, doctor, yes—yes and I told her to get right back into bed, I'd be right out."

"Incredible," he mumbled, "incredible."

"Will that hurt her?" I pleaded.

"Will what hurt her?"

"Incredible!" I said. And still don't know why the doctor grinned. Well, the old car snorted up the hills, and back-fired down them. Leaning heavy 'round the bends she ticked off the six miles quick. A cow got in the way once. I pressed the horn button, and it went "Br-r-r-p-p" and unthinkingly I said "Excuse me."

Looking back, on that evening, I sure feel like the fool that I was. As long as I live, I'll never forget the scene when we opened the door.

There was Marie on her hands and knees, over a cardboard carton which held Donalds and five newly born kittens!

I had to wait six more weeks before I became a father!

Veteran's SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and servicemen and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Self-Employment

Approximately 380,000 veterans have received more than $118,000,000 in readjustment allowances for self-employment under provisions of the G.I. bill as of the end of the fiscal year June 30, the Veterans administration has announced.

These self-employed veterans were engaged in farming, independent businesses or in trades or professions. The vast majority of such veterans are engaged in agricultural activities and the remaining enterprises vary from operation of a shoe repair establishment to the practice of medicine or law.

These allowances are available to veterans engaged in full-time self-employment for profit, and if their net earnings for a given month are less than $100, they are paid the difference between the net earnings and $100. The period for which a veteran is entitled to allowances depends upon his length of service in the armed forces, the maximum being 10 1/2 months if the veteran has over 9 1/2 months of service to his credit.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son has been in the army almost 4 years, spending 31 months overseas. He came back to the states in February, 1946, suffering from a bad mental condition. He is now in jail charged with burglary. Military authorities won't act on the civil laws. He has employed a lawyer and asked for a doctor to check him over. He pled guilty at the preliminary hearing. He has enlisted back in the army for three more years. His bond is $750, but he is unable to furnish bond and must remain in jail until superior court meets in August. He is my sole support. My father is 115 years old. I am 56 and in poor health unable to work. He made an allotment for support. Will it stop while he is in prison? Where can I apply for help for my son? — M. N., Columbus, Ga.

A. I am afraid I cannot give you much help. Your son's attorney should know what is best for him to do. The army says that while a serviceman is in the hands of the civil authorities he is considered away without leave. After three months all allowances are cancelled. Should he be convicted, he will be discharged from the army.

Q. I was in the army 19 months and want to get some information about my discharge, since it is a Section 8. How can I go about getting the $20 a week as I have been out of employment most of the time and the discharge keeps me from getting any decent job? — J. F. W., Harrisburg, Mo.

A. Section 8 of the basic army regulations covers a multitude of sins, and discharged under that section is neither honorable nor dishonorable. If you received a "blue" discharge would suggest that you write to the office of the adjutant general, war department, Washington 25, D. C., and ask for a review of your discharge. Or you may apply to the nearest office of the Veterans administration and explain to them under what conditions you were discharged and they might waive the discharge since it was made at the convenience of the government.

Q. I am a World War II veteran discharged with service-connected disability and am drawing 100 per cent compensation. I am receiving medical care from my local doctor. Are my wife and daughter also entitled to medical care? — C. R. B., Arab, Ala.

A. No.

Q. How may one go about getting alimony from a veteran who is on retirement pay when she is not sure of his whereabouts? Must she have an attorney and take it to court or can it be settled out of court? — Mrs. L. P., Chattanooga, Tenn.

A. This man is a civilian, out of the army, if he is a veteran and this is a legal case, so advise you consult an attorney.

Q. I was a widow of a Spanish war veteran and I remarried. Could I receive my pension back again if I were to divorce the man I am married to? — E. F., East Peoria, Ill.

A. No. The law says that the pension right of a widow is terminated upon her remarriage and such right may not be revived.

Q. My son, a captain, was killed in action. He was a fighter pilot and was our main support and helped part of his pay to us. I want to inquire if we would be eligible for a pension. — M. K., Wheatland, Wyo.

A. Both you and your husband are surely entitled to a pension if you were dependent upon your son. Suggest that you apply immediately to the Veterans administration, sub-regional office at 1720 Carey avenue, Cheyenne, Wyo., and am sure that you would be entitled to $25 each per month.

Decisions

Men and nations gain or lose by the quality of decisions they make. Founders of this remarkable republic made a wise decision long ago, in favor of personal self-reliance and individual government. America is great today because so many smart people were left free to do as much as they could, as well as they knew how, and gain as much of a reward for themselves as they were able.

Not all Americans are models of progress and success but they all have benefited more or less from the achievements of those who did have the immortal spark. You can't pick successful men before they try, but more men of outstanding talent are sure to come to light where everyone is allowed to do his best. A large number of thinkers at work always adds up to more for everybody.

Not Luck at All
People may orate about America's greatness coming from her vast natural resources. The resources exist all right but the redskins had them before Columbus came and didn't know the use of a wheel. Some people boast of this nation's blue-blood heritage. It was good. Our forebears, in large part, came from Europe. That was probably the greatest thing most of them ever did.

America's economic system is what made America great. It is a system of liberty giving every man the right to pick what he wants and go after it hammer-and-sledge, get it if he can and enjoy it to the extent of his capacity, so long as it does not trespass the rights of somebody else. It is a free and dynamic economy, quickly adjustable to changing times and conditions.

What Developed?
Limitless opportunity and keen competition have borne a rich harvest. Our farmers live better than the peasants of some foreign lands. Our laborers have more than workers elsewhere ever have had at any time. America has 75% of the world's population and 80% of the world's automobiles. We send more children to high school and college than all the rest of the world combined.

During the last two years of World War II, from a startled start in December, 1941, America made more war materials than all her allies and her foes put together. An American carpenter can buy more with his pay for a day's work than any other carpenter anywhere—2½ times as much as the carpenter in Germany or France. And the same goes in all trades; the butcher, the baker and the street-car conductor.

How It Works
Freedom of opportunity fires everybody to try; thus men of great genius come to light and the whole nation benefits. Then competition between men of special ability stimulates them to zealous effort in turning out products of excellence at fair prices to deliver and hold profitable markets. This enables America's middle class to enjoy luxuries unknown to run-of-mine kings.

Mass production for volume sales demands fine and expensive tools. Buying this machinery calls for capital investment—averaging $4,000 per industrial job in the United States. The thing that made America great was a decision to be free: Free to work, free to think, free to earn, free to save and free to invest and make a profit. It is called Free Enterprise and it's too valuable to lose.

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

You know, for Ph D type of palpitant' our U S A dotes its champagne to no man. We are in a continuous sweat—our pores are open 24 hours—don't have time to catch our breath between problems. Think for the car in front if it over heats for the red light. Have a nervous breakdown before we sprout wisdom teeth.

Alright, says Henry, I can listen a couple minutes. Make it snappy. Like fish in a barrel, I say. It is easy to fix. Us folks here, we just don't know what kind of sucker we are—been one so long it is chronic. That is what causes our dilemma. We never tune out our radio, and the boys who dial up the problems, they eat well—they stay in office. First it was inflation—now they say it is deflation. That whichever it is, they can fix it—just keep 'em there a little longer. Their swivel chair, it is nice and comfortable.

I'm still listenin', says Henry. That is a compliment, I says. Go out now, I says, and preach the gospel. Tell the first man you meet that Uncle Josephus said he was an out and out sucker. That will make him hoppin' mad—he will wave his arms—he will tune out his walkie-talkie—and as he cackles, and gets a minutes time to think, he will agree with you. Yours with the low down, JO BERRA

The average household for glass two hours of reading glasses at a cost of about a cent and a half.

PLEASE PRINT NAME AND ADDRESS ON OTHER SIDE

This is not just an "electric light bill"

It is your monthly charge for clean, comfortable, convenient living... electric living. Of course, your electric lights are included in the bill, but so are lots of other things.

If your home is equipped with an electric refrigerator, range, iron, radio, cleaner, washer or any other appliance, the cost of operating each one is included in this charge. Yes, the name "electric light bill" is wrong; it is a carryover from the early days of service companies when home and store lighting was about all that electricity did.

Today no other single service does so much for so little. If your bill last month was six dollars, and the month had thirty days, you paid but twenty cents a day to operate all the lights and appliances in your home. Twenty cents a day for better living... for electric living.

CENTRAL MAINE POWER COMPANY

Kathleen Norris Says:

In the Looking Glass

By Lynn Chambers

"Make home heaven. Make it simpler, smaller, if you like, but create about yourself and your own people a stronghold of security."

IF, ONCE A YEAR, say, you could look right into your husband's mind and see exactly what he is thinking of you, what would you see?

Certainly it would be a stunning shock.

You might see that for some years he has been saying to himself, "If she doesn't stop that whining poor talk, one of these days I'll walk out on her."

He might say, "Why does she always have to knock my family in that delicate, pleasant way? Why does she always sneak in some little dig at mother, and remind me that Sally's first husband divorced her? Sally's happy now, and mother's always kind to us. It gets me all nettled to have my wife always—always—always finding some mean little thing to say about them."

Or it might be, "All right, go on running up big bills, go on complaining that you can't have what other women have, and I'll break down someday and tell you just how sweet and comforting and companionable my little office sweetheart is."

Unfortunately, since we can't look into each other's minds we go on year after year, sometimes, hurting each other, in little ways or big ways. You hate to tell your husband where he falls you, it hurts his feelings so deeply, it hurts his pride. He hesitates to tell you where you fall him; he wants to, he means to, but the right moment never comes, and so time goes by, and he grows set in his annoying little habits, and you grow set in yours.

Find Out What's Wrong. It is a wise woman who determines to discover these defects for herself. Only a very stupid one refuses to admit that she has her faults, her irritating ways, her unreasonable limitations. Once admitting that in some way you fail your family and your friends, that there is something disagreeable that they all agree upon when they dissect your character, the next thing is to find out what it is.

Always being late with everything? Always talking poor? Always meeting him with the worst of the day's news? Always wishing things were different? Always in debt? Always critical of his family? What is it that those who love you, wish to goodness you would change?

The reason I write of this universal situation is because so many homes are trembling now on the brink of trouble. More than ever before in our national history people are nervous, some without cause, some with cause. Men have come back from the war shattered and not apt to become normal for some time. Constant reminders of the cold and starvation overseas make our hearts heavy and our own security seems something of which to be almost ashamed.

This bad time can be and will be weathered, but not without a demand for new heroism upon every wife and homemaker and mother.

What does he think about you?

HAVEN OF HAPPINESS

There are many small causes of friction even in the happiest families. It may be that the wife nags and whines. She may be dull and lifeless, even if she fulfills all her duties faithfully. Some women are extravagant and demanding. Others are always comparing their state with someone's else.

Many husbands seldom or never mention these wifely traits that so annoy them. They try to go along, realizing that their own faults may be pretty hard to endure too. If every wife could look into her husband's mind once a year, says Miss Norris, she probably would be surprised and startled at what she would discover.

During these trying postwar years, when nerves are still tense, little irritations grow into serious quarrels. The divorce courts are full of husbands and wives who got on each other's nerves. It is every wife's duty, counsels Miss Norris, to try to make her home as pleasant as she can. It should be a little haven of happiness in a distraught world.

It is upon us women that the heaviest responsibility falls, and in our hands lies the cure. We must stop hoping for men to change, conditions to change, coats to go down, paychecks to go up, and determine to change just one thing, ourselves. Change from nagging to pleasantness, from debt to solvency, from disagreeable criticism and sulky alienation to that amiable, confident equality, that is the very essence of peace at home.

Stronghold of Security. Make home heaven. Make it simpler, smaller, if you like, move it to less expensive quarters, cut out many of the things that you feel today you cannot do without, but create about yourself and your own people a stronghold of security, and begin the process by asking yourself just what, if you had a chance from the outside, you would want changed.

There are no days in which to be coldly reasonable, and expect reasonableness from others. These are days of desperate crisis; we are living through a time of pay-caps, the strain that already has broken us down into thousands of neurotics, thousands of cases of mental collapse. Not all of these are in our base hospitals; many of them are at family breakfast-tables, or selling things in shops, or teaching our children in schools. The old world cannot suffer the fevers that have racked her for five years without having to face a long convalescence.

No take hold of your own problem and reduce it not only to safety and sanity, but to happiness and harmony as well. There may have to be many changes. But make the first one in yourself.

Aluminum Wear Heavy "cast" aluminum vessels are made by pouring the molten metal into castings or forms. "Stamped" aluminumware is stamped from sheets of the metal and then pressed into shape. It comes in three grades—light, medium and heavy.

The heavier the aluminum, the more durable the utensil. But, too, heavy aluminum wastes fuel. Thin, lightweight aluminum is less expensive and lighter to handle, but it also dents and bends more easily.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Eat With Relish If You Put Up Own Pickles, Chili

After you wash jars for canning, sterilize them by pouring hot water to fill, then empty water from them and set the jars inverted on a clean towel until ready to use.

Your family won't go without those tasty pickles, chili sauces and catsup if you put up your own supplies this summer and fall. We don't know what market conditions will be for these products during the next year, but if you have your own you won't be a slave to market conditions.

Most canning budgets will permit putting up some relishes because as a general rule, they do not require too much in the way of sweetening. If these recipes prove too generous in quantity, cut them in halves or quarters and follow instructions.

I'm including old favorites in pickles and relishes which I'm sure will add much to your personal eating pleasure during the winter. It's easy to make pickles because they have enough vinegar and spices so that you will not have to worry too much about spoilage.

Now, let's get the jars ready and make plans for canning on the next fairly cool day that comes along. I know you'll want a good supply of these two favorite pickles for next winter:

Bread and Butter Pickles.
25 large cucumbers
12 onions, sliced
1/2 cup salt

Place cucumbers in cold water and let stand until crisp. Wipe dry and slice. Add sliced onion and salt. Let stand one hour. Do not drain. Add:

1 quart vinegar with a little water
2 1/2 cups sugar
2 tablespoons mustard seed
2 tablespoons ginger root
2 tablespoons celery seed

Boil all together for 5 minutes. While hot, fill sterile jars and seal.

Sweet Mixed Pickles.
1 medium-sized heads cauliflower
2 quarts tender waxed beans
2 quarts small green beans
4 chili peppers
2 quarts tiny green cucumbers
4 large cucumbers
1 quart small white onions
1 gallon vinegar
4 pounds granulated sugar
4 small pieces horseradish root
1 tablespoon whole cloves
1 tablespoon pepper corns
1 tablespoon celery seed
2 tablespoons ground cinnamon
4 bay leaves

Prepare and wash all vegetables. Cut wax beans into one-inch lengths.

LYNN SAYS:

Cleaning Your Wallpaper: Non-washable wallpaper may be cleaned with special cleaners designed to remove spots and stains without wetting them.

Before attempting to clean dust the wallpaper thoroughly, then use the cleaner according to directions. Clean a strip at the baseboard first, then clean upwards with smooth, even strokes. Repeat the process, starting with the clean strip every time. When finished, brush the walls to remove crumbs that may have accumulated.

Washable wallpapers may be cleaned by dusting the walls thoroughly, then washing in frothy suds made with a mild soap and water. Apply this with a sponge. Rinse thoroughly with another sponge dipped in clear, cold water.

Crayon marks, grease spots and smudges may be washed off with mild soapy suds, with a sponge.

leave green beans whole. Dice cucumbers, cut peppers fine. Place beans, peppers, onions and cucumbers into enough cold salted water (1/2 cup salt to one gallon of water) to cover. Let stand overnight and drain. Separate cauliflower into small pieces. Cook 10 minutes in boiling water. Drain. Cook beans 10 minutes in boiling water, drain.

Boil sugar, spices and vinegar for 10 minutes, add vegetables and cook for another 10 minutes. Let stand until cold. Pack vegetables into sterile jars and fill with hot vinegar-spice mixture. This will make about 10 pints of pickles.

Our wartime shortages of catsup and chili sauce have made many homemakers determined to have a plentiful supply of their own. Besides, what's better than the fragrance and superior taste of these home-made delicacies?

Chili Sauce.
1/2 bushel of tomatoes
21 medium-sized onions, ground
3 green peppers, ground
3 red peppers, ground
1 large bunch celery
3 tablespoons salt
1 quart vinegar
3 pints sugar
4 tablespoons mixed spices (placed in a bag)

Cook all ingredients together until thick. Fill sterile jars and seal.

Tomato Catsup.
1 bushel ripe tomatoes
6 large red peppers
10 large onions
Wash and core tomatoes, seed peppers, peel onions and cut into pieces. Cook in their own juice until soft, then strain. This will make about 2 gallons of pulp.

2 gallons of tomato pulp
1 quart sugar
2 quarts cider vinegar
2 tablespoons salt
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
Cook tomato pulp for 30 minutes. Add sugar, vinegar, salt and cinnamon. Boil until thickened, then seal in sterilized jars.

You might just as well make watermelon rind pickles because they make such a nice relish for meat courses, and they are inexpensive, too.

Watermelon Pickles.
4 pounds watermelon rind
2 quarts vinegar
1 pint water
4 1/2 pounds granulated sugar
2 tablespoons allspice
2 tablespoons whole cloves

10 2-inch pieces of cinnamon bark
Select firm rind. Trim off green skin and pink flesh. Weigh. Cut into inch cubes and soak for 2 1/2 hours in lime water. (Use 2 quarts water to 2 tablespoons lime.) Drain.

Gather all your preserving equipment together to make working efficient once you start the process of putting food in the jars.

cover with fresh water and cook 1 1/2 hours, until tender, adding more water as it boils off. Let stand in this water overnight. Drain.

Bring vinegar, water, salt, and spices (tied loosely in a cheesecloth bag) to boiling point, and add the drained rind and boil gently for 2 hours or until syrup is thickened. Remove spice bag and pack hot pickles into jars and seal. Store in cool place.

Peanut loaf is as delicious as the best meat loaf and nourishing as well. Mix chopped roasted peanuts with chopped carrot or other vegetables. Blend the mixture together with a thick sauce. Bake until firm and serve with tomato sauce.

Well-Fitting Gown in Large Sizes Daytime Frock Is Easy to Make

Cool Nightie
ESPECIALLY nice for the slightly larger figure is this neat and delightfully cool night dress. Narrow lace makes a pretty design to match the flattering sweetheart neckline. The back is slit to the waist and there's a narrow belt to tie. Use a colorful all-over print with crisp white trimming.

Pattern No. 1529 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 38, 3 1/2 yards of 35 or 38-inch; 1 1/2 yards narrow lace

Beginner's Dress
JUST two main pattern pieces for this charming daytime frock that closes just below the waist. Makes easy sewing for the beginner. Dropped shoulders accent a trim, neat waist, soft gathering.

Primitive?
Noting the scanty attire of one of the young ladies attending a costume ball, one of the guests commented to Ethel Barrymore, "I must say her taste in dress is original."

Quipped the actress, "Aboriginal!"

Enough Is Enough
"Aren't you glad now," said father, "that you prayed for a baby sister?"
"Yes," replied Tommy, after another glance at the twins. "And aren't you glad I only prayed twice?"

New definition of a pacifist: A man who can take part in a peace conference without getting into a fight.

Another Miss
"I don't like your heart action," said the doctor to the young man. "But, of course, you've had previous trouble with angina pectoris." The youth heaved a deep sigh. "Yes, doctor, I have," he replied: "but you haven't got her name quite right."

Mapped Out
The bus driver was unfortunate enough to run his car into a house where a woman stood ironing. Having lost his nerve, he did not know what to say, and blurted out:
"Can you tell me the way to Wigan?"
"Yes," replied the woman, "Straight past the sideboard and then to the left past the piano!"

Took No Chance
"He told me last night that I looked positively ethereal in the moonlight!"
"What does that mean?"
"I don't know, but I snatched his face to be on the safe side!"

Just the Thing
"I want to buy that book in the window called, 'How to Captivate Men,'" said the little girl to the book clerk.

"Why, that's not the sort of book for you," he said, looking dubious. "It's for the child. 'What do you want it for?'"
"For my Daddy. He's a policeman."

ers and a bow tie give a dainty feminine air. Certain to win you many compliments.

Pattern No. 1532 comes in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 14 requires 4 yards of 35 or 38-inch.

WORLD WAR I BRIDES

World War II Brides

MARKED CONTRAST . . . Foreign girls were wooed and won by American soldiers in both world wars but, as the above pictures attest, there was a marked difference in the brides of two generations. Photo (1) shows a group of American soldiers in World War I's army of occupation entraining at Coblenz, many bringing back wives and children. Girls like those shown in photo (2) won the hearts of American servicemen in World War I, the picture showing typical war brides ready to embark for the U. S. In contrast to their sister war brides of a quarter century ago, World War II brides show every evidence of modernity. Photo (3) shows joyous wives of ex-G.I.s obligingly posing on the railing of a transport in typical Hollywood style, although minus the fishnet touches. Longer duration of World War II resulted in larger families for G.I.s and their foreign brides. Larger than ordinary is the family of Arthur Smith of Greenville, N. C. Mrs. Smith is shown in photo (4) arriving from England with her four children, two of which were by a former marriage. An Italian girl "fell hard" for Joseph Cianciotto of Rochester, N. Y., and they were married in Italy. Mrs. Cianciotto "fell hard" for him again when her war bride ship docked in New York, as photo (5) attests. Even modern modes of transportation were utilized in reuniting G.I.s and their foreign brides, photo (6) showing a group of war brides arriving in America by airliner.

'LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON'

Statistics Show Equal Foreign Marriage Rate for Both Wars

Influx of war brides to all parts of the United States leads to the general impression that G.I.s serving overseas during World War II were more addicted to marrying foreign girls than were their doughboy fathers of World War I. From the British Isles, France and Germany, even from far-away Australia and the Philippines, have come bride ships transporting war wives to America to join their former G.I. husbands.

The common impression that the average G.I. of World War II was more inclined to take a foreign wife than was his counterpart of World War I is contradicted in statistics compiled by Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

Records indicate that there were about 52,500 marriages with foreign girls during World War II, compared with an estimated 4,000 to 6,000 during the war of a quarter century ago. Records for war marriages at that time are very incomplete.

Despite the increased number, however, the foreign marriage rate of the two generations of servicemen is practically equal.

Longer duration of World War II and the far greater numbers serving overseas account for the increase in marriages, statisticians point out.

Third Have Children. Duration of the war also is responsible for an increased number of children in war marriages. The 52,500 foreign brides coming to the U. S. to join their husbands were accompanied by 17,500 children, indicating that nearly a third had children. In a majority of cases there were only one child, although there are instances of as many as three children.

War marriages were most common in European and Mediterranean theaters. Nearly 60,000 of the 70,000 brides and children came from these two areas and they represented more than 30 different nationalities.

Great Britain had the largest percentage of war brides, 75 per cent, followed by France and Italy with 15 per cent each, Belgium and Ireland with 3 per cent each, with about 4 per cent from the other countries of Europe and North Africa.

Many From Australia. From the Pacific area came 10,000 war brides, 85 per cent of whom were from Australia. Another 10 per cent are from New Zealand and 5 per cent from other countries, particularly the Philippines.

Age of war brides varies considerably, with marked concentrations in the late teens and early twenties.

Just as personnel of the armed forces was recruited from every state in the Union, so will these wives and children of ex-G.I.s settle in every part of the country.

Union Baseball Up Again

The fight to unionize baseball has flared up again, with the Pennsylvania state labor board accepting jurisdiction in the Pittsburgh baseball club's case. Casey at the bat may yet be there with a union card as well.

Unionized baseball intrigues us. We are tired of the old patterns in the national game and yearn for such items in the box scores as "out at first under checkoff rule," "left on bases; stockholders, 7; directors, 5," "forced at third by jurisdictional dispute."

The game has become too smooth and peaceful. Gone are the old days of brawls and fireworks every inning. What may be needed are some flashy interludes where the pickets overturn some automobiles in the outfield, where a game is called on account of tear gas or where some Petrillo of the national fame orders a team to use four players at first, and put on extra shortstops at night games.

It seems to us that modern ball players lack the martial spirit. There is too much friendliness and goodwill on the field. Can you imagine Phil Murray taking a third called strike with nothing more than a scornful look?

It seems to us evident that the modern baseball player needs protection. He is too prone to taking a third strike philosophically instead of blaming it on the front office. He is too inclined to lose a pennant with a shrug of the shoulders instead of with a protest that he is being crucified by management.

Union rules will level off rewards. There is no reason why a man who can sock homers every day should get more than a fellow worker who does his best but can't poke one out of the infield. Hits and runs are not the proper measure for rewards. All men are created equal, and beyond that it is just luck, rhythm and box scores.

Robert Murphy, who is doing the union organizing in baseball, is a Harvard man. This puts Harvard one up on Yale and Princeton, but we hear Yale may soon demand a 40-hour week for golfers, while Princeton will ask for the four-day week for horseshoe pitchers.

Batter up! And, remember, a fair division of the profits or else.

OMIGOSH!

"Take It Easy Avoid Accidents" has been formally adopted as a slogan in the war against auto accidents, and stickers are being issued to be pasted on windshields. All of which makes us giggle. "Take It Easy" lacks punch, but even if it were a good slogan a windshield sticker would be about as effective against auto accidents as a harp solo against the atomic bomb.

Death and slaughter rule the road. At laws the goofy drivers sticker; So up and at the killers all—We'll fight 'em with a windshield sticker!

They beat the green, defy the red; They run folks down with yells of "Quicker!" So let us act decisively—The cry is "Forward . . . with a sticker!"

Blood Test Used To Fix Maternity In Animal World

CHICAGO.—An equine parallel to Hollywood's recent series of paternity disputes was reported by the American Veterinary Medical association.

The investigation described by the veterinary authorities was made by two French veterinary scientists and was believed to be the first practical application of blood grouping to determine parentage in horses.

The problem was to determine which of two mares, "Fanny" or "Clairette," was the mother of a colt named "Robert." Serum tests showed that Fanny's blood belonged to group "AB," Clairette's to group "A" and Robert's to group "O."

Statute Books Contain Many Outmoded Regulations

Ancient blue laws continue to gather dust on New Jersey statute books.

A person who drives a horse while intoxicated—the driver, that is, not the horse—is subject to a fine of from $2.50 to $10 and 30 days' imprisonment, according to one of the outmoded laws.

Another law authorizes magistrates to order a ball and chain to be placed on the leg of any tramp tried as disorderly persons.

Soil Termed Great Laboratory For Production of New Drugs

Soil not only is the source of life-supporting food but also is a great laboratory in which are produced many new-found drugs for curing diseases of man and beast against which even good nutrition cannot prevail, according to Alden Stahr and Dr. Boyd Woodruff in an article in Capper's Farmer.

"These are the so-called miracle drugs, first of which was tyrothricin," says the article. "Then came penicillin, used extensively during the war, followed by actinomycin, streptomycin, clavacin and gramicin. Others have been discovered and more are in prospect."

Among the things scientists have seen and identified, Stahr and Woodruff point out, are: One-celled plants, molds, green plants, animals, protozoa, worms and nematodes. And these soil inhabitants do more than provide fertility to the soil. In their struggle for existence, many of them throw off waste products and create chemical substances which are deadly to disease germs.

Thus a very special strain or species of fungi yielded penicillin, which shared the credit with blood plasma and the sulfa drugs in greatly reducing the wound mortality rate in World War II as compared with the First World War. "The soil," conclude the writers, "is so complex a mixture that there must be many other healing agents found in it. Many of man's 2,000 diseases still are unconquered. Most prevalent of all, of course, is the common cold, which causes more economic loss and discomfort to people than any other disease and, weakening the system, paves the way for more serious ailments."

ing followers to worship him. Selling a floral wreath at a home where a funeral is about to take place is barred, the offense being listed as disorderly conduct and making the offender liable to a fine. Dumping of junk on private property also puts a person in the cut-law class.

The legislature meets yearly to correct existing laws and enact new ones, but calmly ignores the outmoded regulations.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY
Sunday Services at 10:45 A. M.
All are cordially invited to attend. "Soul" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon that will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 18.

The Golden Text is: "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour" (Luke 1: 46, 47).

The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee and went up into a mountain, and sat down there. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, dumb, and maimed, and many others; and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them: insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see; and they glorified the God of Israel" (Matthew 15: 29-31).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following selections from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Knowing that Soul and its attributes were forever manifested through man, the Master healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, feet to the lame, thus bringing to light the scientific action of the divine Mind on human minds and bodies and giving a better understanding of Soul and salvation" (page 210: 11-19).
